PRACTICES OF DIVORCE LAWYERS

Receive Fees, but Fail to Pay Taxes Into Court.

Judge Keyser entered a decree in a divorce case Friday which is an illustration of the result of the practice of certain attorneys who collect fees in divorce cases from their clients, usually women, with the understanding many cases the woman who thinks she has been divorced, marries again, only to learn that her first husband was not legally divorced. This situation arises from the rule which provides that a divorce is not final until the clerk has paid the fee and the decree has been filed. No divorce is granted.

The case in question was that of J. Orinda B. Barrick, who applied to the court in 1892 for a divorce from Joseph D. Barrick. Several specific charges, cruelly and unjustly set up in the petition, and the plaintiff asked for a divorce and the custody of the children of the couple, Edward J. and Margaret B. Barrick, aged 12 and 18, respectively, at the time the case was heard. The defendant was a resident of Omaha at that time. They were married in December, 1874, and the peticruelty extending over a period of near twenty years.

The records show that a hearing was held in the case October 19, 1894, Barrick appearing to contest the case, the record showing that he had left this part of country. A decree was ordered granting the estate of Mrs. Barrick a decree was notified. The attorney for Mrs. Barrick is now a member of the estate legislature from Doug county.

A few days after an application was made to Judge Keyser to reinstate the case on the docket and the case was set for trial on Friday, and upon the showing made the decree was ordered and was entered record, bearing date of Friday.

Mrs. Barrick and her children are now residents of another city.

JUDGMENT AGAINST AN ATTORNEY

Owner of a Gasoline Launch Wins His Case

George M. Northrup recovered judgment. Judge Powell's court yesterday against C. P. Halligan for $675, the verdict being really an allowance to Halligan of $225 and attorney's fees.

This was a case which has been pending in the courts for nearly three years. Northrup is a non-resident, and in 1893 he sent Halligan a mortgage on a gasoline launch and then relying on the Missouri river with its many shifting channels, Northrup constructed Halligan to levy on the boat.

It appeared at Omaha, and Halligan succeeded in attaching the vessel while the company was playing at Florence. This caused a hot legal fight, certain eastern people claiming a lien on the boat.

The first trial was at St. Louis, and the jury found in favor of Northrup.

the matter, and Halligan finally secured $9 for his client. The mortgage held by Northrup had been invalidated by releases of the property, and Halligan alleged that the case was an extremely hazardous one. Halligan claimed half of the money as his fee. Northrup refused to settle on that basis, and a suit was started in the county court. Halligan in the meantime holding the money. Northrup secured judgment against Halligan for $500, this being a victory for Halligan. Northrup appealed to the district court and the jury returned a verdict yesterday giving Northrup a judgment against Halligan for $675, cutting the former award to Halligan in half. The latter will appeal the case.

The indications are also that there will be a large acreage of splendid spring wheat throughout Nebraska."
